Dental Card.

I would say a word to the Gentlemen and Ladies of Bangor and vicinity As parents you would do for your children than for yourselves. A gentleman in Bangor who is fifty years old was in my office April and said that he would give me one hundred dollars if I would save one tooth in his mouth with out extracting it But he was too late. If it will do this value one tooth what should be done for children

Now if you cannot save your own you can save the teeth of your children Almost every day some mother will come to the office with some little one to have me extract some aching tooth from its mouth and find that the painful tooth is temporary but a permanent one. The parent exclaims, you are wrong she has never had but one tooth there she will certainly have a permanent one when it comes out of the way

A large proportion of our patrons have never known we have forgotten that in our first set we have but sixteen teeth And that all teeth that grow after twenty are permanent ones thirty two I have extracted within the past year, seven teeth for one little girl who was not eleven Why will parents suffer your children to suffer further this time by your neglect? If by care I save 8 your natural teeth a good edition will I know where to go for the best artificial teeth Hundreds of people in Bangor and vicinity will testify to their own experience all that he has stated in this paper

ABE LINCOLN—Though we have not the honor of a personal acquaintance with the gentleman we have reason to believe that he is a most skillful practitioner of the dental art At least he has taken our old face in our house look young as it has fitted by art a pair of jaws to mastication the food again which dame nature thought to take away I think the combination of the two features set in the Lincoln Intelligencer cannot be excelled anywhere

Mr Lincoln will S90 for a whole set of the best Teeth $5 for a half set.

EASTWARD TENDENCY OF PLEASURE TRAVEL.

One of the most conspicuous results of the extension of our facilities of communication, has been the rapid appreciation by the people of other sections of the comparatively unsuspected attractions of our sea-coast and lake resorts for summer tourists. Those who have been educated to regard Maine only as a good place from which to emigrate have discovered in our healthful climate, the diversified landscape of lake and mountain scenery of the interior, and the unequalled grandeur of our coast line, a refreshing substitute for the hackneyed pleasures of the more fashionable watering places, and every year brings a larger inflex of pleasure-seekers, who in turn repeat to a larger circle of friends the story of their delightful sojourn "away down east," thus creating impressions regarding our State, whose favorable effects are not measured by the mere increase of transient guests. In evidence of the increasing attention bestowed upon this section as a resort for seekers of health and recreation, we copy the following article from the N. Y. Evening Post, a journal which aims to cultivate the æsthetic tastes of New Yorkers, and which is largely circulated at all the watering places:

The Halifax Chronicle addresses a few words to the people of the United States who are seeking pleasure and health away from the crowded cities. It thinks that they cannot do better than to leave the beaten paths to Long Branch, Newport and Saratoga, for fresher ones along the northeastern coast. For a beautiful summer climate, and for novel fields of enjoyment, it says, come to Nova Scotia.

This is good advice. Many people who have visited nearly all the summer resorts, from Cape May to the White Mountains, will, no doubt, this year extend their tour eastward through Maine and New Brunswick, and perhaps to Nova Scotia. The Maine watering places are attracting more attention every year, and Mount Desert is destined before long to be one of the most popular resorts in the country, combining as it does the most delightful water and mountain scenery to be found at any point on the coast. Many other places along the shores of Maine are attractive, and the same is true of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

Several delightful water trips are open to the traveller to these eastern resorts. Steamboats leave Boston and Portland for Bangor and farther down the coast to Castine, Mount Desert, Eastport, St. John, Yarmouth and Halifax. At Bangor the tourist will find the most convenient route to the inland resorts, to Moosehead Lake and Mount Kataldin, or by a short land ride to Mount Desert and the adjacent islands. The sail along the coast cannot be surpassed for its interesting scenery and the country towards the lakes and mountains northward is delightful for its variety of wild and of cultivated landscape.

For several years the movement of pleasure-seekers to Eastern Maine has been increasing, so that many who go in that direction this year must go to New Brunswick and Nova Scotia to find novelty. In the next two or three years there will be a great change in favor of these extreme eastern resorts. Next year it is expected that the European and North American Railway will connect Bangor and Halifax, and then the summer tourists will find that even Nova Scotia is only a few hours further away than the White Mountains. They who visit Nova Scotia now, therefore, are only the pioneers of a movement of pleasure-seekers which will be annually made a few years hence toward the cool retreats in the north of Maine and the maritime provinces.

John Russell Young, who was probably the only American editor in Paris during the Commune insurrection, has published a ten-column letter in his paper, the N. Y. Standard, giving a masterly description of the events transpiring around him as they appeared to an American journalist. Mr. Young's letter evinces that the earnestness of the insurgent leaders impressed him strangly, though he deprecated their frightful excesses. His sympathy with the purposes of the Communists is entitled to consideration as that of an eye-witness, but the history of the horrible deeds and vicious doctrines of the Commune will have to be entirely expunged, before Americans as a people will consent to modify their verdict of utter condemnation.

It is possible that Gen. Cluseret, late Communist Minister of War, may survive to read his own obituaries in the English and American newspapers. It is now rumored that this soldier of fortune is alive and a dispatch received yesterday announced his arrest. The original report of his execution was but a line from Paris to the London papers, to the effect that he had been executed by the Versailles authorities.

Ex-Confederate General J. H. Clanton, who raised 64 rebel companies and is now Chairman of the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee, was examined by the Congressional Committee on Monday. He denied the existence of Ku-Klux in Alabama, asserted that the State was entirely peaceful, that the Democracy there favored the education of the negro, and said much more which would be cheering if other testimony was not so entirely different.

The reporter who took down General Sherman's Indian speech says that distinguished chieftain pleasantly cautioned him to be careful what kind of a report he sent to the press for publication, as he had been abused by the whole country for a speech attributed to him at New Orleans which contained sentiments he had never uttered. "Speech making," observed the General, "is not my vocation, and when I do indulge in a little informal talk, if it is considered worth laying before the world I want to have no sins but my own to answer for."

The provision of the Ku-Klux Bill authorizing the President to suspend the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus is made terminable at the end of the next regular session of Congress, and this restriction has been popularly but erroneously extended to the entire act. The mistake is a not unnatural one, but it is worth correcting.

The New Orleans Bee says Southerners would be untrue to those who "laid down their lives in defense of the Constitution," untrue to themselves and untrue to their posterity if they were to recognize the rightfulness of amendments which have never been lawfully adopted, or acknowledge that they are final and irreversible.

THE N. Y. CENTRAL TAX CASE. The N. Y. Herald says that the dispute between the Revenue Department and the New York Central Railroad Company, with reference to the tax on the 80 per cent. dividend of the latter corporation, has been settled by a reference of the whole affair, to a couple of auditors who will make an investigation of the Company's affairs and report how much of the dividend represents the earnings previous to the passage of the law imposing a tax on dividends. This proportion once settled, the last claim of the Co., to exemption will be quieted, and the payment of the tax will follow.

Some of the New York papers assert that Dr. Connolly, who murdered his children and then killed himself, on Sunday, was not a drunkard, and that he used his knife with all the skill of a man having a thorough knowledge of surgery. Hints are thrown out of domestic troubles and of former threats of Dr. Connolly to commit suicide. The Coroner's inquest resulted in a verdict, according to the facts already known, and that Connolly was suffering from an attack of acute insanity.

THE NEW RAILROAD WAR.

EASTERN VS. BOSTON & MAINE RAILROAD.

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier:

The people of this State have an interest in this question, which they would do well not to lose sight of. The last Legislature by a majority unparalleled in the history of severely contested cases, granted the Boston and Maine Railroad Company the right to extend its road into Portland. The B. & M. Railroad argued that persons interested in the Eastern Railroad owned sufficient stock in the Portland, Saco & Portsmouth Railroad to control it, and that there was an "apprehension" that the E. R. R. intended to thereby get possession of the P. S. & P. R. R. and manage it, so as to deprive the B. & M. R. R. of its legitimate and reasonable right to have its trains hauled over the P. S. & P. R. R. The opposition stoutly contested the proposed extension, but the Legislature wisely saw through their flimsy arguments and granted the desired charter—thereby asserting its right—(never yet surrendered) to control the railroads of this State, and authorize the building of parallel lines of railroad whenever the public interest demand it. The state of things prophesied by the Boston & Maine Railroad—have they not all come to pass? Does any man doubt? The Eastern Railroad has swallowed the P. S. & P. Railroad in the words of a celebrated poet:—"hat and boots and hymn book too," and having accomplished that, and well digested it, now seeks to control the running of the trains on the B. & M. Railroad. It has refused to take the B & M. R. R. trains over its road, and if its assumptions are admitted, the B. & M. Railroad and the people of this State who wish to travel over that road are bound hand and foot, entirely at its mercy. And now because the B. & M. R. R. went into the Courts and got an order compelling the Eastern Railroad to take its trains, it has petitioned for the removal of the interdict of the Court, by its next best friend the Portland, Saco & Portsmouth Railroad, and a hearing is to be had before the full bench.—Already the best legal talent in the State has been engaged upon the side of the Eastern Railroad, and there is no doubt, much wisdom and justice in a multitude of counsellors.

The P. S. & P. Railroad Company was incorporated March 14, 1837. Under its charter it is obliged to take the trains of a connecting railroad, and nothing in its charter prescribes when or how those trains are to be taken. If not when the convenience of the public require—when?

The Eastern Railroad—(controlling the P. S. & P. Railroad) a foreign corporation come into this State, and put on airs—after being driven into running the Pullman Express trains by the superior energy of the Directors of the Maine Central Railroad and at the risk of the last named road, they undertake to deprive the people of this State who desire to travel to or from the principal towns on the Boston & Maine Railroad, of their equal rights to express trains.

It is well that this question is now to be settled by the Court. If the Court shall decide that this Eastern Railroad has a right to dictate to the people of this State, how or when they shall travel, it is quite time to know the fact, for it only shows tha. future Legislatures have still something to do to protect the reserved rights of the people.

A large number of Presidents of the National Banks of Boston, Philadelphia and New York, met at the latter place, Tuesday, to protest against the collection of tax on Bank dividends for the five months ending January 1st, 1871. POLITICAL AND PERSONAL

Senator Carpenter receives an enthusiastic ovation on his return home to Milwaukee on Monday evening.

The recent frank utterances of Robert Toombs of Georgia do not please the new-departure Democracy.

The Emperor of Brazil recently informed a correspondent that he did not propose to visit the United States this year.

The Democratic Committee of Chester County, Pa., have published an address repudiating the new movement and adhering to the old idea of a "white man's party."

Alexander H. Stephens has connected himself with the Atlanta (Ga.) Daily Sun as political editor. The Sun is one of the most flourishing papers in the South.

Hon. Lewis D. Campbell denies that he said he would resign his seat in Congress if it was proved that the ballot-box was stuffed in the Third Ohio District. He says he made the canvass honorably, and that he does not believe fraud was perpetrated. How about Mr. Schwab?

Mr. Vallandigham leaves one child, a boy, who was with him at the time of his death.—Before the war Mr. V. was a member of the Presbyterian church at Dayton, but his course during the war made him so many opponents in that body that he united with the Episcopalians.

The New York World grumbles through a column editorial because the President sees fit to keep that colored boy, Smith, at West Point. It says the act is "a defiance" offered to "decency, to military discipline, to the law," and to the "Democracy of the whole Union." Unhappy World.

The latest move in Massachusetts politics is a proposition made by some active politicians, who propose to shelve all present and possible candidates for the Governorship of Massachusetts, and bring forward Hon. Debility and Emaciation

Both result from the lack of ability to convert the food into nutriment. How necessary, then, for those suffering from these alarming symptoms to immediately resort to a remedy that will strengthen the stomach and digestive organs. For, as soon as this desirable object has been accomplished, the health improves, and the patient resumes his usual personal appearance. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters have attained a world-wide popularity in such cases, and have been proven the best and safest means of removing constipation, toning the stomach, giving energy to the liver, and relieving every symptom of nervousness and depression of spirits. Its cheering and beneficial effects are highly spoken of by thousands, who owe to it their restoration to health. No restorative in the annals of medicine has attained the same popularity in the short space of time it has been before the public, or has won the high endorsements accorded to this excellent tonic. Many other preparations, purporting to be correctives and restoratives, have been introduced and have perished one by one, while the popularity of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters continues to increase, and is now recognized as a standard household medicine. The success which attends the use of the Bitters evinces at once its virtues in all cases of debility and disease of the stomach. Certificates, almost without number, have been published, attesting its truly miraculous power in removing those painful and fearful diseases. And at this time it seems idle to do more than call attention to the great remedy of the age, in order to awaken public attention to its excellence. It is the only preparation of the kind that is reliable in all cases, and it is therefore worthy of the consideration of the afflicted.

CORRECT.

One morn while going down the street,
I met two gents intently talking,
Their earnestness seemed strange to me,
So I slacked up my pace in walking.
One was a large man, very fat,
The other sickly, lean and puny;
The contrast was so very great,
It really seemed extremely funny.
And this I heard the lean man say,
"What can I do to make me healthy?
I'd rather have that fat you wear,
Than to be made immensely wealthy."
"I'll tell you then," Fatty replied,
"Were I lean as all skin and bone,
I'd change my tactics very quick,

JEFF DAVIS'S PETTICOAT AND BARNUM'S MUSEUM At enthusiastic young rebel of Atlanta, Georgia, recently addressed a letter to the N Y Evening Post, which we give below, with the comments of that paper

The Savannah News of June 3, charitably says you may not be the author of the infamous article in your issue of the 30th ult. abusing our beloved President, but you are responsible for repeating the silly lie, charging him with being in a 'disguise' when captured

You may remember your 'Prince of Humbug,' Barnum, dared to represent President Davis dressed as a woman, &c Soon after the Museum was burned—a righteous retribution If it be treason to love our President, our hero, and our captain, why then your people must make the most of it. That is all, so "put it in your pipe and smoke it."

One who was four years a rebel and six months a prisoner in a Yankee "hell"—as you are so fond of styling our own prisons.

I am, &c, C HERBST

Barnum's Museum was burned July 13, 1865 It was supposed to have caught fire by accident, but this was doubted by many. Mr Herbst seems to have some reason for believing that it was burned by an incendiary, a friend of Mr Davis, who was indignant at the exposure of that gentleman's effigy in woman's clothes. Ought not Mr. Herbst to be sent for and examined by Fire Marshal Megrath Speaker on this subject? The frightful attempt of Mr Davis's friends to burn the whole City of New York a little while before Barnum's Museum was destroyed still needs some explanations, and Mr Herbst writes like a man who could give some information about it.

CHIEF JUSTICE CHASE TO VALLANDIGHAM The following is published as the last letter received by Vallandigham from Chief Justice Chase

Washington, May 20, 1871

My Dear Sir—I have just read the resolutions of the Montgomery County, (Ohio) Democratic Convention, reported by yourself, together with your remarks and those of Mr. Cook You have rendered great service to your country and the party, at least such is my judgment. May God bless you for it—Nothing can be truer than your declaration that the movement contemplated by the resolutions is a restoration of the Democratic party to its ancient platform of progress and reform. I know you too wel to doubt your courage or fidelity to your convictions.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) S P CHASE.

DAISY WARD'S WORK, by Mary W McLain This beautiful little volume is from the press of A. K. Loring, Boston, and contains a history of the struggles of a gifted young artist who, in spite of the loving opposition of friends and the natural disadvantages of sex and position, succeeds in reaching the high position in her art to which she has so earnestly aspired.

The Columbus Crisis, a weekly Democratic organ, has been merged into the Ohio Statesman, In announcing the close of its separate existence, its editor, Mr. Webb, says: "The founder of this paper, whose memory is everywhere revered by the Democracy, expired on the eve of the fatal election of 1864, and it is not inappropriate that the newspaper he established should expire at a time when new departures arise to controvert the principles and ideas it ever maintained".

JOHN CARDIFF'S SWORD Hon L L Hamlin has shown us a very unique and formidable looking sword, presented to the Bangor Historical Society by Capt Chas B Sanford It was recently discovered about a foot below the surface of the ground, by workmen who were ploughing about the new Wassaumkeag Hotel near the site of old Fort Pownal, at Fort Point. The weapon is nearly four feet long has a double circular guard about the handle, weighs about four pounds and though somewhat rust-eaten, is in a good state of preservation. There are various opinions concerning the age of this relic, some supposing it to have been used by some soldier in the ancient fort (built in 1759) and others think it was in use at the Hampden battle and afterwards buried by some discomfited trooper The general opinion seems to be, however, that it must be the lost sword of the Cardiff Giant, as it is too heavy for a man of common strength to wield

Thursday morning St. John's Commandery will escort the De Molays to the cars and they will leave for home on the regular morning train.

—A dispatch states that a severe accident occurred during the outdoor concert at Thomaston, Monday evening, by the collision of two teams from Rockland. Mr. Reuben Winslow, accompanied by a lady, was driving rapidly towards Rockland, two other teams being just in advance of him, when he saw another team, driven by a young man named Sawyer, coming rapidly towards him and checked his horse, drawing up towards the right side of the road. In passing between the two carriages in advance of Winslow, Sawyer's team was crowded toward the side of the street and came in collision with Winslow's, one of the shafts of the carriage striking the horse of the latter in the breast and inflicting a fatal wound. Sawyer was accompanied by two young ladies, and as soon as the collision occurred, his horse turned and ran in the opposite direction, upsetting the carriage and throwing out its occupants, injuring them all more or less severely One of the young ladies, Miss Annie Harrington, had her wrist fractured, the other, Miss Lizzie Marsh, was considerably bruised and shaken, and Mr Sawyer had his hip badly bruised and the bone probably fractured. The occupants of the other carriage escaped without harm

THE COLORADO POTATO BUG Dr J H Thompson of Milwaukee, Wis, has sent us a vial containing a large number of the Colorado potato bugs which are making such a havoc with the potato crop in the West. The bugs resemble in form, color and marking the 'striped bug' which devours our squash and cucumber plants, but the potato bug is about three times the size of his striped neighbor The Doctor writes as follows

"I send you a sample of the Potato Bug raised in my garden this year From four hundred hills of potatoes, I have removed thus far twelve quarts of bugs, any single bug of which would have destroyed a hill of potatoes Soon after the potatoes were planted the bugs began to sit up with them, watching for their first appearance above ground, when they went for them Each day since they have been completely removed from the vines and destroyed, but each succeeding day new ones take the place of the slain, and share a like fate They are very poisonous and tenacious of life—prefer the potato, but will thrive on tomato vines or corn They first appeared in Colorado, and are travelling eastward at a rapid rate, for which reason I send you these, that you may know when they arrive in Maine—which will be quite soon enough I warrant as also that they will stay long enough "

CONSUMPTION.

ITS CURE AND ITS PREVENTIVE,

By J. H. SCHENCK, M. D.

Many a human being has passed away for whose death there was no other reason than the neglect of known and indisputable proved means of cure Those near and dear to family and friends are sleeping the dreamless slumber into which had they only adopted and availed themselves of his wonderfully efficacious medicines they would not have fallen.

DR. JOSEPH H SCHENCK'S SIMPLE TREATMENT,

Dr Schenck has in his own case proven that where there was sufficient vitality remains that vitality by his medicines and his directions for their use is quickened into healthful vigor

In this statement there is nothing presumptuous. To the faith of the invalid is made no representation that is not a thousand times substantiated by living and visible works The theory of the cure by Dr Schenck's medicines is as simple as it is unfailing Its philosophy requires no argument. It is self asserting self-convincing

The Seaweed Tonic and Mandrake Pills are the first two weapons with which the citadel of the malady is assailed Two-thirds of the cases of consumption originate in dyspepsia and a functionally disordered liver With this condition the bronchial tubes sympathize with the stomach They respond to the morbific lesion of the liver Here then comes the culminating result and the setting in with all its distressing symptoms of

CONSUMPTION.

The Mandrake Pills are composed of one of Nature's noblest gifts—the Podophyllum Peltatum They possess all the blood-searching alterative properties of calomel but unlike calomel they

"LEAVE NO STING BEHIND"

The work of cure is now beginning The vitiated and mucous deposits in the bowels and in the alimentary canal are ejected The liver like a clock is wound up to vigorous from its torpidity The stomach acts responsively and the patient begins to feel that he is getting at last

A SUPPLY OF GOOD BLOOD

The Seaweed Tonic in conjunction with the Pills permeates and assimilates with the food Chylification is now progressing without its previous tortures Digestion becomes pain

ABBAYE AUX DAMES.

BY MRS MARY H DODGE

Sweetest place to live or die in,
Lovely smiling, fresh to view,
Hillocks green the weary lie in,
Fallen asleep in Hotel-Dieu!
Holy living holy dying, where each path seems good and true
Only that the fatal motto haunts us, "Elles ne sortent plus"

Haunts us with a thought of pressing
All the ruby from the rose,
By an silent but confessing,
Blooms with fragrance idly blows
Not alone are flowers protesting diamonds flash from out the dew
For in the sealed stars are gleaming naught saith, Elles ne sortent plus

Naught but man the fool knaveth
Spurning boldly of His good,
Fearful of what He may loath
Hiding from His angry mood!
Better to our Christian thinking mingled rosemary and rue
Than the heart's ease, singly blowing will sparing Elles ne sortent plus"

Through each life some knell is ringing
Closing fast a garden door
Dumb to all our tendrest singing
Wildest pleading, evermore!
Best to choose this cloistered living from the sun shine seek the zero!
Nay! saith not till God has said it say not, "Elles ne sortent plus"

He to each a cross assending,
Meted with livinest eye,
Tells how and lower bending,
Not out reaching while on high,
He retains it not rejecting fairest gems that earth hath given
Wistful children happy want His "Elles ne sortent plus

Gentle sisters softly glliding
Whispering sternest duties call
Our there be an angel gulding,
Will turn stone your hearts you will?
Until we for your devotion to the poor our charities call in,
Hence the poor are with you always why then Elles ne sortent plus?

Thus I mused as scantering slowly
Through the Abbaye and Hotel
Where God uses in other holy
Strive in goodness to excel
Still I mused in thought conflicting till this truth it rather threw
That true souls bloom best in freedom, not when Elles ne sortent plus

MIGGLES

BY BRET HARTE

We were eight, including the driver. We had not spoken during the passage of the last six miles since the jolting of the heavy vehicle over the roughening road had spoiled the Judge's last poetical quotation. The tall man beside the Judge was asleep his arm passed through the swaying strap and his head resting upon it,—altogether a limp, helpless looking object as if he had hanged himself and been cut down too late. The French lady on the back seat was asleep, too, yet in a half conscious propriety of attitude, shown even in the disposition of the handkerchief which shielded her forehead and which partially veiled her face. The lady from Virginia City twelve with her husband, had long since lost all individuality in a wild confusion of ribbons veils furs and shawls. There was no sound but the rattling of wheels and the dash of rain upon the roof. Suddenly the stage stopped and we became dimly aware of voices. The driver was evidently in the midst of an exciting colloquy with some one in the road—a colloquy of which such fragments as "bridge gone," "twenty feet of water can't pass," were occasionally distinguishable above the storm. Then came a lull and a mysterious voice from the road shouted the parting question—

"Hey Miggles?"

We caught a glimpse of some leaden sky through slowly turning wheels as the horses moved through the ram, and we were evidently going our way to Miggles.

"Who and where was Miggles? The Judge, our authority did not remember the name and he knew the country thoroughly. The Washoe traveller thought Miggles must keep a hotel. We only knew that we were stopped by high water in front and rear and that Miggles was our rock of refuge. A few minutes splashing through a tangled by road scarcely with enough for the stage and we drew up before a barred and bolted gate in a wide stone wall or fence about eight feet high. Evidently Miggles, and evidently Miggles did not keep a hotel.

The driver got down and tried the gate. It was securely locked.

"Miggles! O Miggles!"

No answer.

Miggles! You, Miggles!" continued the driver with rising wrath.

Miggles!" joined in the expressman persuasively. "O Miggy Miggy!"

But no reply came from the apparently insensate Miggles. The Judge who had finally got the window down, put his head out and propounded a series of questions, which if answered categorically would have undoubtedly elucidated the whole mystery, but which the driver evaded by replying that "if we didn't want to stay the coach all night we had better rise up and sing out for Miggles."

So we rose up and called on Miggles in chorus then separately. And when we had finished a Hibernian fellow passenger from the rear called for "Miggells" what ever we all laughed. While we were laughing, the driver cried "shore!"

We listened! To our infinite amazement the chorus of Miggles was repeated from the other side of the wall, even to the final and supplemental "Maggells!"

Extraordinary echo, said the Judge.

"Extraordinary d—d skunk!" roared the driver contemptuously. "Come out of that Miggles and show yourself! Brace man, Miggles! Don't hide in the dark, I wouldn't if I was you Miggles" continued Yuba Bill now furious, about in excess of fury.

"My good man Mr Myghall!" said the Judge, softening the asperities of the name as much as possible. "Consider the inhospitality of refusing shelter from the inclemency of the weather to helpless females. Really my dear sir—" But a succession of "Miggles" ending in a burst of laughter, drowned his voice.

Yuba Bill hesitated no longer. Taking a heavy stone from the road, he battered down the gate and with the expressman entered the enclosure. We followed. Nobody was to be seen. In the gathering darkness all that we could distinguish was that we were in a garden—from the rose bushes that scattered over us a minute spray from their dripping leaves and from a long, rambling wooden building before us.

"Do you know this Miggles?" asked the Judge of Yuba Bill.

"No nor don't want to" said Bill shortly, who felt the Pioneer Stage Company insulted in his person by the contumacious Miggles.

"But, my dear sir," expostulated the Judge, with thought of the barred gate.

"I tell you here," said Yuba Bill, with a fine oath "hadn't you better go back and sit in the coach till yer introduced? I'm going in," and he pushed open the door of the building.

A long room lighted only by the embers of a fire that was dying on the large hearth at its further extremity, the walls curiously prepared and the flickering firelight bringing out its grotesque pattern, somebody sitting in a large arm chair by the fireplace. All this we saw as we crowded together into the room, after the driver and expressman.

"Hello, he you Miggles?" said Yuba Bill to the solitary occupant.

The figure neither spoke nor stirred. Yuba Bill walked wrathfully toward it, and turned the eye of his coach lantern upon its face. It was a mere face, prematurely old and wrinkled, with very large eyes, in which there was the expression of perfectly gratuitous solemnity which I had sometimes seen in an owl's. The large eyes wandered from Bill's face to the lantern, and finally fixed their gaze on that luminous object, without further recognition.

Bill restrained himself with an effort.

"Miggles! He you deaf? You am't dumb anyhow, you know, and Yuba Bill shook the insensate figure by the shoulder.

To our great dismay, as Bill removed his hand the inoffensive stranger apparently collapsed—sinking into half his size and an undistinguishable heap of clothing.

"Well, durn my skin," said Bill, looking appealingly at us, and hopelessly retiring from the contest.

The Judge now stepped forward, and we lifted the mysterious invertebrate back into his original position. Bill was dismissed with the lantern to reconnoitre outside, for it was evident that from the helplessness of this solitary man there must be attendants near at hand, and we all drew around the fire. The Judge, who had regained his authority,—standing before us with his back to the hearth,—charged us, as an imaginary jury, as follows—

"It is evident that either our distinguished friend here has reached that condition described by Shakespeare as 'the sere and yellow leaf,' or has suffered some premature abatement of his mental and physical faculties. Whether he is really the Miggles—"

Here he was interrupted by "M ggles! O Miggles! Miggleys! Mig!" and, in fact, the whole chorus of Miggles in very much the same key as it had once before been delivered unto us.

We gazed at each other for a moment in some alarm. The Judge, in particular, vacated his position quickly, as the voice seemed to come directly over his shoulder. The cause however, was soon discovered in a large magpie, who was perched upon a shelf over the fireplace, and who immediately relapsed into a sepulchral silence which contrasted singularly with his previous volubility. It was undoubtedly, his voice which we had heard in the road, and our friend in the chair was not responsible for the discourtesy. Yuba Bill, who re-entered the room after an unsuccessful search, was loth to accept the explanation and still eyed the helpless sitter with suspicion. He had found a shed in which he had put up his horses, but he came back dripping and sceptical. "Thar isn't nobody but him within ten miles of the shanty, and that 'ar d—d old skeesicks knows it."

But the faith of the majority proved to be securely based. Bill had scarcely ceased growling before we heard a quick step upon the porch, the trailing of a wet skirt, the door was flung open, and with a flash of white teeth, a sparkle of dark eyes, and an utter absence of ceremony or diffidence, a young woman entered, shut the door, and, panting, leaned back against it.

"O, if you please, I'm Miggles!"

And this was Miggles' this bright-eyed, full throated young woman, whose wet gown of coarse blue stuff could not hide the beauty of the feminine curves to which it clung, from the chestnut crown of whose head, topped by a man's oil skin sou'wester, to the tip of the feet and ankles, hidden somewhere in the recesses of her boy's brogans, all was grace,—thus was Miggles, laughing at us, too, in the most airy, frank, off hand manner imaginable.

"You see, boys," said she, quite out of breath, and holding one little hand against her side, quite unheeding the speechless discomfiture of our party, or the complete demoralization of Yuba Bill, whose features had relaxed into an expression of gratuitous and imbecile cheerfulness,—"you see, boys, I was more'n two miles away when you passed down the road. I thought you might pull up here, and so I ran the whole way, knowing nobody was home but Jim,—and—and—I'm out of breath—and—that lets me out."

And here Miggles caught her dripping oil skin hat from her head, with a mischievous swirl that scattered a shower of rain drops over us, attempted to put back her hair, dropped two hair pins in the attempt, laughed and sat down beside Yuba Bill, with her hands crossed lightly in her lap.

The Judge recovered himself first, and essayed an extravagant compliment.

"I'll trouble you for that hair pin," said Miggles, gravely. Half a dozen hands were eagerly stretched forward, the missing hair pin was restored to its fair owner, and Miggles crossing the room, looked keenly in the face of the invalid. The solemn eyes looked back at hers with an expression we had never seen before. Life and intelligence seemed to struggle back into the rugged face. Miggles laughed again—it was a singularly eloquent laugh—and turned her black eyes and white teeth once more toward us.

"This afflicted person is—" hesitated the Judge.

"Jim" said Miggles.

"Your father?"

"No."

"Brother?"

"No."

"Husband?"

Miggles darted a quick half defiant glance at the two lady passengers, who I had noticed did not participate in the general merriment. Miggles and said gravely

"No, it's Jim."

There was an awkward pause. The lady passengers moved closer to each other, the Washoe husband looked abstractedly at the fire and the tall man apparently turned his eyes inward for self support at this emergency. But Miggles's laugh, which was very infectious broke the silence. "Come," she said, briskly, "you must be hungry. Who'll lend a hand to help me get tea?"

She had no lack of volunteers. In a few moments Yuba Bill was engaged like Cadiz in bringing logs for this Miguelita, the expressman was grinding coffee on the verandah to myself the arduous duty of slicing bacon was assigned, and the Judge lent each man his good humored and valuable counsel. And when Miggles, assisted by the Judge and our Hibernian "black passenger," set the table with all the available crockery, we had become quite joyous, in spite of the rain that beat against windows, the wind that whirled down the chimney, the two Indian women who whispered together in the corner or the magpie who uttered satirical and croaking commentary on their conversation from his perch above. In the now bright, blazing fire we could see that the walls were papered with illustrated journals, arranged with feminine taste and discrimination. The furniture was extemporized and adapted from candle boxes and packing cases, and covered with gay cloth or the skin of some animal. The uncouth chair of the helpless Jim was an ingenious variation of a flour barrel. The room had neatness, and even a taste for the picturesque, to be seen in the few details of the long low room.

FRENCH

LAMP CHIMNEYS,

These chimneys, which are now for the first time offered to the public, possess all the essentials of a heat-resisting chimney. They are well made, of a superior quality of glass, each one finished smoothly at the bottom, and being carefully annealed or tempered, will not break from the most intense heat of a lamp flame.

A trial of their merits will convince the consumer that, although costing a trifle more than the ordinary class of Chimneys in use, they will prove a source of much economy in the use of Kerosene, a saving of untold trouble and annoyance, and a preventative of many accidents hitherto resulting from the breakage of Chimneys upon burning Lamps.

Having become satisfied after thorough investigation that Elastic Sponge, as now and lately manufactured is one of the best of all the substitutes for curled hair, for many if not most uses in Upholstery we have accepted the Agency of it and intend to make it hereafter a specialty in our business. The objections which have been made to it and which it is well known we ourselves have thought were well founded we back, assert that cannot be urged against the article as now perfected. The process of manufacture has been entirely remodelled under the advice and supervision of one of the most eminent chemists of New England. New chemical and mechanical appliances have been introduced in cleansing crude Sponge and in charging it with glycerine with such entire success that Elastic Sponge may now be said to be chemically pure. There is absolutely nothing in it but the clean fibres of sponge and chemically pure glycerine.

The objections to Elastic Sponge being thus removed there remain its undisputed merits which certainly entitle it to be considered one of the most valuable as it is one of the most curious and interesting of fibrous excreta. Chief among these merits is that it is proof against moths,—the great scourge of the business—and against all other insects. Then its elasticity is permanent based as it is upon the non evaporable property of glycerine and the indestructibility of sponge fibre. We have always been satisfied upon these two points which are the essential requisites in such materials. The evidence is now equally clear that it is wholesome and sweet. It is certainly soft, easy to manipulate and tough enough for all uses at the lowest prices of goods. For the upholstering of Churches Theatres Public Halls, Railway Stations, Omnibuses Carriages, Steamboats and Hotels, Cars and the like, it will prove all in all, in everything considered, the best article in use. For all uses, and especially for Bed lining, we are now prepared to recommend the public to give it a fair trial as we ourselves intend to do. We are ready also to answer inquiries, make estimates and take orders for every description of work in Sponge as well as to supply the trade in articles in bulk.
